Dear Representative Baumbach,

On behalf of Delaware's hospitals and health systems, thank you for the opportunity to comment on House Bill 140, relating to End of Life Options.

Terry Murphy,

HB 140 would permit a terminally ill adult resident of Delaware to request and self-administer medication prescribed by a physician or APRN to end the individual's life if certain conditions specified in the legislation are met.

While we have concerns with the underlying premise of the bill, as it runs counter to the core mission of health care providers, we also greatly appreciate your willingness to make changes that allow health care providers to opt-out of prescribing of end-of-life medication.

In addition, some of the debate around this issue has focused on pain and discomfort experienced by patients who would qualify to end their own life under this legislation. The robust state of palliative care available in Delaware today allows pain to be addressed in a manner affording any patient comfort as they confront terminal illness. Delaware recently received a perfect 100% score in the State-by-State Report Card on Access to Palliative Care in Our Nation's Hospitals, a collaboration by the Center to Advance Palliative Care (CAPC) and the National Palliative Care Research Center (NPCRC).

While we continue to make significant advancements in hospice and palliative care access and quality, Delaware has not made commensurate investments in the electronic medical records infrastructure to support hospice, palliative care and home care in a seamless continuum of care. Without better infrastructure support for measures, including but not limited to fully funding DMOST and Advance Care Directives in the Delaware Health Information Network, this legislation may continue to present liability and risk to hospitals, health systems and providers.
